

Editorial

This issue of the Journal of the Academy of Rehabilitative Audiology is the 30th issue of the journal, and my fifth and final issue as Editor. With pleasure, I direct your attention to the lead article of this issue, "A Retrospective Look at the Future of Aural Rehabilitation." The passionate plea by Mark Ross to consider the future of audiologic rehabilitation within the context of our roots is a most appropriate and timely lead article for the 30th anniversary of the journal. I encourage you to read it, re-read it, and share it with all of your audiology colleagues who may not be members of the Academy.

Before leaving my post as Editor of the journal, I wish to express my heartfelt appreciation to the JARA editorial reviewers. These individuals unselfishly gave up their time to provide timely (usually) and cogent (always) reviews, which were invaluable both to me and to potential authors.

Finally, please join me in welcoming Linda Thibodeau as the new editor of the journal. I leave my position as editor knowing that the journal is in her excellent hands.
